- 1. The opportunity to taste something delicious;
- 2. The opportunity to learn the Russian way of thinking;

You may take a taxi to go to a theater or a museum, but subway is really worth descending there at least once. Every day, the residents of Moscow and Saint Petersburg have a chance to feast their eyes with the genuine works of art. Unlike most subways in Europe with stations quite ascetic in terms of design, in the Soviet metro every station was designed individually by the country's best architects. In Moscow subway, 44 central stations are listed as cultural heritage sites. Subway in Saint Petersburg is 20 years younger than the Moscow one, but it also has 6 of its stations listed as cultural heritage sites. Besides, The Guardian listed Avtovo station as one of the World's Most Beautiful Metro Stations.

Every day, many tourists start their fascinating journey around the Golden Ring, a famous tourist itinerary that encompasses the oldest cities of the central part of European Russia, its historic and cultural heritage sites. A brief glance at a map will tell you why they call it this way. The matter is that all these cities are located around Moscow and the road connecting them looks like a large circle. Traditionally, the Golden Ring includes 8 cities, i.e. Sergiyev Posad, Pereslavl-Zalessky, Rostov Veliky, Yaroslavl, Kostroma, Ivanovo, Suzdal, and Vladimir. However, recently there is a trend to expand this list.

This is here that the Russian history began. And this is why a trip around the Golden Ring is one of the best ways to learn about Russia and to understand the country's mentality.

The historic center of Yaroslavl, a city with centuries-long history, is particularly worth seeing. One of its main attractions is called Strelka (a split cape at the rivers junction), a place where the Kotorosl River meets the Volga. This is here that Yaroslavl was founded, and to mark this, there is a monument of the city's Millennium.

Strelka is a great outing place that offers breathtaking views from the high river bank. Volzhskaya (Arsenalnaya) Tower is another place worth seeing. This is a remaining part of an old citadel that was used as an arsenal. One more place to see is an ensemble of churches along the Volga riverside. Metropolitan's Chambers is also a place to visit. These Chambers were constructed in the 17th century as a grand residence for Metropolitan Jonah (Iona) Sysoevich, the Orthodox Church leader of Yaroslavl. Today these Chambers host a rich exhibition of icons. Having visited Strelka, the tourists usually proceed to the six-column rotunda at the Volzhskaya Embankment, another symbol of Yarolsavl, where they can enjoy the beautiful city sights.

The Trinity Lavra of St. Sergius in Sergiyev Posad, a symbol of Russian Orthodoxy and a major spiritual and cultural center. This monastery was founded in the 14th century by Sergius of Radonezh, one of the most venerated Russian saints. The Lavra is not far away from Moscow. Many pilgrims take the road there to draw some holy water from the springs inside the Monastery walls.

Having visited dozens of churches that form the Lavra complex, you may taste the authentic monastery food in a budget-friendly eating place.

Back in the 12th and 13th centuries, the Golden Gate of Vladimir was the city's front gate created to welcome special guests. Clad with gilded copper, its oak tree wings glittered brightly in the sun giving the Golden Gate its poetic name.

They say that Moscow is a city that never sleeps. This is quite true. Things are humming here 24/7: bars and restaurants are crowded, and traffic jams may last until the early hours. The central districts are beautifully illuminated and the tourists are astonished by the number of shops and dining places that are open around the clock. The same applies to Saint Petersburg. Both the cities will offer you entertainments of all sorts at any time of the day or night.

During the daytime, you may diversify your tourist agenda by visiting any of the numerous dining places that offer Russian, European or Chinese cuisine or by shopping. A perfect place for such pastime in Moscow is Okhotny Ryad Shopping Center. As for Saint Petersburg, the best shopping and dining place is Bolshoy Gostiny Dvor.

In the evening, it is time for a theater performance or a concert, like visiting Moscow Conservatory or the Grand Concert Hall Oktyabrsky in Saint Petersburg. Night is the right time for an escape quest and after that it is great to relax in a disco club.

Culture Trip to Russia

6 tens of millions of tourists. Visitors from abroad are attracted by the country's undisturbed nature, natural reserves, mountains, rivers, and lakes. Though not all the tourists visit Russia in search of its natural sites. About half of inbound tourist traffic is received by either Moscow or St. Petersburg where travelers are attracted by cultural sites and other places of interest located in the country's major cities. Thus, in 2016 about 4.5 million foreign tourists visited Moscow and about 3 million tourists visited St. Petersburg.

The Russian Museum in Saint Petersburg is dedicated to the Russian fine art. Just like the State Hermitage, it is located in the rooms of palaces formerly owned by emperors and
